

3 Possible Reasons You Don't Have "It" Yet

Often times as we travel through life, it appears that many people get or have exactly what they want. Then, we look at our own life and wonder why it seems like everything we want is constantly delayed or never comes without a fight. We work hard. We position ourselves appropriately, yet that which we long for, and in some instances, prepare years for continues to remain but a wish.

Indeed, there could be a laundry list of reasons why what we desire seems to keep evading us, however, for the sake of this article consider these three reasons:

- 1) We may not actually be as ready as we "think" we are to have what we want. And if we pay attention long enough things will begin to happen to reveal to us just how unready we are. Yes, you may be able to afford it, but are you ready. Yes, you may have time to use it, but are you ready. And be clear, ready in this context is an all inclusive factor—mentally, emotionally, psychologically, spiritually and financially. So for example: You and your spouse may be financially able to afford a child, but are you mentally ready to have a child in your midst much less jointly raise a child given how much you two already argue about the least little difference of opinion.
- 2) The window of opportunity may have passed us by because we were distracted and now we have to patiently wait for our season of possession to come around again. Timing, like kindness, is something that is grossly underappreciated in the big picture of life. Far better is it for a thing to not come into our lives at all than for it to come and we not recognize its presence for what it is.
- 3) Our motives or intentions for wanting "it" may not be right thus the Universe is protecting us from possessing that which it knows we are better off without...period. Coming to terms with why we want "it" is more important than positioning ourselves to get "it". More often than not we fix our minds on a thing without ever entertaining the question "why". This alone can be a set up for failure in every sense of the word.

This information is made available to you compliments of Greatness Now™. Greatness Now™ is a national human development company that specializes in fostering opportunities that inspire individuals to acknowledge and actualize their greatness. Learn more about Greatness Now™ at www.greatnessnow.org.